Target Audience

This symposium is directed primarily to medical oncologists, radiation oncologists, surgical oncologists, researchers and registered oncology nurses interested in new developments for treatment of lung cancer. No specific skill or knowledge other than a basic training in oncology is required for successful participation in this activity. Fellows, nurses and pharmacists are also invited to attend.

Statement of Need/Program Overview

This Symposium is intended to provide comprehensive updates on biology, diagnosis, screening, and management of lung cancer. Paradigm shift in the treatment options of non-small-cell lung cancer and small-cell lung cancer will be discussed. This meeting will facilitate interaction among oncologists and researchers interested in development of novel therapeutics for treatment of lung cancer. In addition to multimodality therapy, adjuvant therapy and surgery, this symposium will present data of most promising emerging agents currently in development for the treatment of lung cancer. The format will include didactic lectures from known thought leaders, questions and answer session, and ample opportunity for participant interaction with faculty. In-depth discussion of antiangiogenic agents, inhibitors of EGFR pathways and drugs that target multiple signaling pathways will also be given significant focus. Emerging data from ongoing clinical research will be presented.
